Insight on Ancient China Series

This new book series offers a clear account of the scale, pattern and function of the big, middle and small cities in the Dynastic history of China and the enormous role these cities played in China's social development. The Dynasties that have helped shape China's history and civilization is examined with an urban focus. To understand Chinese history and society the eye must be focused on the cities not just the rural areas, and these new books draw a panoramic picture of the urban politics, economy, culture, religion and customs to help the reader better understand ancient and modern China.

Cases in Modern Chinese Business

China has its own history and success in business with a system of management which is very different to Western models. China's business methods are receiving more global attention as the Chinese economy rises and plays an increasingly significant role in the global economy. However Chinese business and management are not widely understood outside China. The authors of the books in this major new series address this issue by providing powerful insights into Chinese business. Cases in Modern Chinese Business offer revealing insights and analysis on how business is done in China. They offer case studies on how companies in China get started and how they succeed and fail. Clear and practical, each book explores how Chinese companies are expanding and starting to thrive in the international market. All titles were written in China and give the real flavour of the Chinese business arena and some of the key players. The culture and philosophy of Chinese business is also examined. To understand the economic and financial success and challenges of modern China it helps to get to know the business environment and some of the leading protagonists. These revealing new books show you how.

 The late Ming Dynasty (1572-1644) and the early Qing Dynasty (1644-1722) saw the true splendour of short essays in China. No other period in the history of short essays in ancient China can match them in the quality and number of works, literary schools, or the variety of styles. Compared with those written before or after, the short essays in these periods were richer in the choice of topics, and freer in form, focusing not only on real social life, but also on worldly experience and life's little delights. They are a rich and vital part of China's literary and cultural heritage.

 Ta Kung Pao is one of the most influential newspapers in modern China. The inaugural issue was published in Tianjing in 1902, and it was subsequently published in Shanghai, Hankou, Hong Kong, Guilin and Chongqing, followed by Hong Kong and Macao after 1949. The last mainland China issue of TKP was published in 1966. TKP has witnessed some of the key events in the creation of modern day China, including the Revolution of 1911 and the founding of the new republic. It was then designated by the Propaganda Department of the Central Committee of the CPC as the government's official newspaper covering all international, political and economic news.

E-ISBN: 9781844640959

£65 €78 $98

English/Cloth/310/2013

To understand Taoism is to understand the roots of contemporary Chinese culture. This hugely significant new book from Hu Fuchen highlights the significance of Taoism in modern day China, and supplies detailed information covering all aspects of a philosophical and religious tradition which is followed by as many as 400 million people worldwide.

Voice From the East: The Chinese Theory of Justice

Editor: Huang Yushun

ISBN: 978-1-84464-358-5

E-ISBN: 9781844643868

£80 €100 $125

English/Cloth/300/2015

This book is a pioneering study on restructuring the Chinese theory of justice against a background of hegemonic dominance of Western theory of justice and of collective aphasia of China's intellectual and academic communities in this aspect. It discusses the problems caused by the dominating Western theory of justice and the urgent needs for a universal theory of justice. It delineates the origin and the development of the Chinese intellectual history of justice and explores ways to address justice-related issues in the contemporary world. This book aims to initiate a dialogue on the theory of justice in the world and to stimulate further debate and research.

Confucius and China in the Modern Age

Editor: Lin Gangan

ISBN: 978-1-84464-264-9

E-ISBN: 9781844643738

£85 €105 $135

English/Cloth/680/2016

This book draws together the contrasting strands of academic material on the advancement and impact of Confucianism within modern day China. Edited by China's foremost expert in this field, this new title examines the events from the 20th and 21st centuries to help unravel the reasons why Confucius belief endured within a rapidly modernising China. Kong Fu-Tzu and Confucianism have undergone dramatic ups and downs during the 20th century in China and the ideological and political struggle between the groups who worships Confucius and anti-Confucius has existed for half a century.

An Outline of Chinese Traditional Philosophy

Editor: Li Cunshan

ISBN: 978-1-84464-265-6

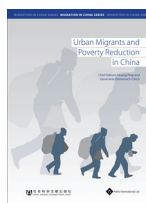

E-ISBN: 9781844643806

£85 €105 $135

English/Cloth/444/2015

The traditional Chinese philosophies of 'nature and human' lie at the heart of China's modern day culture and popular philosophical beliefs. To understand China, you must first understand its traditional philosophies. This book from leading expert Li Cunshan outlines the core beliefs and key elements of the three principles of traditional Chinese philosophy: the natural theory (cosmology); the human theory (the theory of life); the theory of knowledge (the theory of methodology).

Urban Poverty Reduction Among Migrants in

China is the result of a large-scale research project conducted across China from 2002 to 2010. Packed full of original material, academic analysis, expert knowledge and practical policy suggestions, it paints a detailed picture of one of the consequences of China's startling economic transformation. Written by the experts at Chinese Academy of Social Sciences (CASS) working in partnership with UNESCO.

Since Reform and Opening up, China has witnessed increasingly large scale rural labor population mobility between town and country.

China's high-speed economic growth has created a burgeoning middle class. Despite its relatively low proportion in terms of the total population, its absolute number is considerable given China's huge population. According to conservative estimates, the Chinese middle class currently total over 100 million people. Some Chinese scholars predict that the middle class will account for 40% of China's population in the next decade, amounting to approximately 400 million. This is a huge number of people, who will exert considerable influence on China's social, economic, cultural and political sectors. This key new book gathers together the latest research results from renowned Chinese scholars who have comprehensively examined the formation of China's middle class.

Since the process of opening-up began China has followed a unique path that's combined progressive economic policies with staying true to its socialist principles. Modern history demonstrates that achieving economic growth within the parameters of a one-party socialist state is rarely attainable, yet China has been able to achieve this on a vast scale. This major new two-volume work, published in partnership with China Social Sciences Press, draws on the expertise of China's leading scholars to show you the reasons behind this success. Editor Zhao Jianying, the president of China's prestigious China Social Science Press, has gathered together material from China's leading thinkers and academics on exactly how China has been able to forge this truly unique model.

Many people want to do business with China but very few foreign business people have an understanding and appreciation of how business is actually conducted in China. This book offers insights into the history, philosophy and practice of business in modern China today. The author of this important new book begins by asking several key questions about business in China: Why is it a common phenomenon in China that one prefers being a leader in a small organization to being led in a big one? Why is it common in Chinese enterprises that within an organization, there is generally a bureaucracy to control a network of comparatively independent subunits? There are different forms of self-organized units within an enterprise, such as affiliated subsidiaries or self-directed teams, contracted out business units, independent local branches, profit-center departments or internal startup teams. Why do Chinese enterprises always network with each other to realize an all-win situation?

This book explores Intercultural communication; cross-cultural communication; social psychology; cross-cultural psychology and Chinese culture

In the context of globalization, values, as one of the cultural cores, play a central role in people's daily communication. This book starts from a psycholexical approach to extract an indigenous Chinese values structure and then relates the locally derived values structure with the cross-culturally and empirically validated Schwartz's individual-level human value contents and structure. It intends to find the culture-specifics in the values structure of Chinese people and meanwhile examine Schwartz's universals in content and structure of human basic values in the context of transforming mainland Chinese society.

The income gap in China has been widening since the country started economic reform in 1978. It can be said that the increasing penetration of FDI into the Chinese economy and a widening income gap among residents are two remarkable phenomena that appeared almost at the same time after China began reform and opening. People are therefore prone to correlate the two phenomena and ask: Is there a certain correlation between FDI and the widening income gap in China? If there is, how does the strength of this correlation evolve? What strength has it reached so far? How did it come into being? These are the questions this research study seeks to answer.

 Through a series of research reports, this book discusses the operational status of Chinese enterprises with foreign investment. Since China's period of economic Reform and Opening-Up the country has experienced more than thirty years of development, with hundreds of thousands of foreign-invested enterprises being established in various parts of the country. Their operational statuses are of interest not only to governments and research institutes, but also to foreign investors and enterprises.

Drawing from a massive collection of published literature and statistics, this research group has collected data and information from relevant departments and local governments. Research and subsequent analyses were drawn from a wide range of resources in order to present a broad view of the basic contours shaping foreign-invested enterprises in China since the beginning of the 21st century, and particularly since the eleventh national "Five Year Construction Plan."

Rural Household Finance in China- A Study on Peasant Household Cooperative Financial Institutions in China from the Perspective of the Household Contract System

Author: Fan Dijun
 ISBN: 978-1-84464-439-1
 E-ISBN: 978-1-84464-440-7

English/£125 €170 $195/cloth/300/2015

This book analyses the financial and rural economic reform of China. Since China started the "revolution" of the rural economy in 1978 a series of reforms has been implemented in the area of rural finance focusing on institutional changes. Looking back on these "historical changes", we can find that there is still a long way to go. China's Central Government has put forward a new concept in the rural financial system. In this book, with cases from Fengyang County and Anhui Province, the birthplace of Chinese rural reform, the author tries to study how to set up a modern rural financial system under the framework of incentive compatible mechanism theory, which was advanced by Nobel prize winners L. Hurwicz, Myerson and Maskin.

Renminbi: The Internationalization of China's Currency

Author: Sun Yaodong
 ISBN: 978-1-84464-317-2
 E-ISBN: 9781844643998

£90 €112 $145/English/cloth/238/2014

Using stories and interesting examples, this book depicts the process of the internationalization of the main global currencies. After that, it systematically analyses the future pattern of the internalization of the Chinese currency the RMB and its possible influence on world trade and global finance. This book is very useful for professionals to understand the future of the RMB and its procedure of becoming a global currency. With the boom of China's economy, the RMB is becoming a regional currency gradually, though still at a low level. Some predict that it will even change into a global currency. But this process cannot be easy. There are many financial problems for the government and private sectors to deal with. This book gives us a systematical analysis of those problems, especially those that emerge after the global financial crisis.

After joining the WTO, China began to implement a Regional Trade Agreement (RTA) strategy. While WTO membership provided China with the best global market access, RTA can serve as both a market access strategy and a foreign policy strategy. Agriculture is at the core of nearly all Asian economies and this vital book examines the effect of the China-ASEAN FTA Early Harvest Program. Regional trade between China and ASEAN is examined from a Chinese perspective and also from the perspectives of major members of ASEAN. It explores how regional trade has allowed greater market access, increased competitiveness and discusses the benefits and the problems for those involved.

This unique book reveals the results of a wide-ranging and hugely significant survey that highlights exactly how Chinese society views the world - this data has never previously been published outside of China. The Chinese Public's Worldview, a social survey that CASS launched in 2007, is of considerable theoretical and practical significance. Most Chinese people have never been abroad and they generally learn about foreign and international affairs through the news media. As China continues to gain international stature, it is becoming increasingly advantageous to understand the views and attitudes of the Chinese public. How do the majority of China's 1.3 billion plus population view the outside world?

East Asian Economic Integration: A China-ASEAN Perspective

The rise of terrorism has become a major factor in the destabilization of global structures since the end of the Cold War. Large-scale terrorist attacks have occurred nearly every year since the 1990s. Many countries, regardless of their stability or volatility, have been hit by this new wave of terrorist tactics. The authors of this book argue that considering the increasing threat that global terrorism poses, it is necessary for us to know what terrorism is. Not only its theoretical definitions, but its major features and possible development trends in the future. They discuss terrorist attacks throughout the world and analyze the nature of these attacks.

Culture and Security: A Strategy for China

National cultural security has become a hot topic of research in recent years. The first step of the research, like many others on national strategy, is to identify current challenges to cultural security with which China is faced. Relevant published articles in China usually assume the pattern of “problems plus countermeasures” which includes connotations of cultural security, strategic significance, roots of problems, current challenges, and approaches and countermeasures. Their titles are often generic

 To understand China, you must first understand the agricultural areas and farmers of China, who have managed to feed 22% of the world's population with only 7% of the world's cultivated land.

China's industrialisation and urbanisation has created pressures on China's cultivated land mass. With the growth in population and rising incomes, China now requires more agricultural products and different agricultural products. More food is needed, with less land to grow it on. Can China cope with this trend? Rural China in Transition will answer this question.

New Technology Energy and Environment

Power Generation in China: Research, Policy and Management
 Author: Yang Hongliang, Shi Dan
 ISBN: 978-1-84464-335-6
 E-ISBN: 9781844643042
 £65 €78 $98/English/Cloth/218/2013

A timely new book that examines the reform of China's vast power generation network and future energy-efficiency and environmental policies. Coal used for power generation accounts for 54% of China's sulphur dioxide emissions. In 2009, electricity generation consumed 50gce more coal than the international advanced level, which means 180 million tons of standard coal equivalent was over consumed in that year (3681.2 billion kWh). In 2009, the line loss rate of PRC's power grid reached to 6.49%, this is 1% higher than the world's advanced level. More than 30 billion KWh of electricity was lost, equal to 10.2 million tons of coal. These are huge losses. In order to improve China's energy efficiency and reduce pollution, the Office of State Council issued the hugely significant Regulation on Energy Conservation Power Generation Dispatching.

China Rural Studies

Left-Behind Children in Rural China
 Editor: Ye Jingzhong
 ISBN: 978-1-84464-082-9
 E-ISBN: 9781844640867

This ground breaking work is the result of research by Plan International China and the China Agricultural University on children who have been left behind in their rural villages when their parents migrate to cities in search of work. There has been for many years the acknowledgement that rural migrant workers have been the backbone of the labour force that provides the muscle for the rapid urban growth and development of the cities of China. This study provides the first insights from the perspectives of children themselves on the phenomenon. We now know as a result of this pioneering study that all is not well with children when their parents migrate to the cities in search of work.

Although there is no denial of climate justice, there has been a persistent lack of practical joined-up actions regarding the creation of an international climate institution. However, politicians and academic researchers have been working together to find solutions. This new book is an attempt to put forward constructive approaches to climate security and justice, building upon the inputs from the wide-ranging debates that took place at the CASS Forum on Climate Justice and the Carbon Budget Approach in Beijing (April 2010). The purpose of this prestigious international conference was to construct an international climate regime and to help promote climate justice. It also called on governments, particularly govern-

China Environment and Development Review : China's Environment and Development in the Era of Globalization

Editor: Zhang Xiao

E-ISBN: 978-1-84464-455-1

English/£80 €100 $130/cloth/478/2015

This book focuses on climate change and China, as well as international trade and China's environmental issues. It investigates the impact of globalization on sustainable development. As a new public issue, climate change has placed the whole world in two dilemmas, commercial rationality dominating our world cannot resolve such dilemmas, therefore greater wisdom is desperately needed, e.g. establishing new civilized norms and value system. The relationship between trade and poverty is discussed, and further effects of globalization on worldwide both environment and natural resource usage are analyzed by those quantitative analysis methods.

Smart Low-Carbon Development of Cities in China

In China, as Internet of Things and cloud-computing have been widely used in various areas, the concept of Intelligent City quickly became one of the most exciting topics in urban development. Various institutes and organizations (e.g., National Technology Department, Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, Chinese Academy of Sciences) proposed their ideas on how to build intelligent cities in China. Intelligent City has tremendous benefits to modern China. Most importantly, utilizing the high-tech methods can help us build low-carbon cities. According to estimates, by building intelligent cities, we are able to increase the efficiency of energy saving and emission reduction by 30%-40%. In order to facilitate the healthy development of intelligent cities in China, build the competitive advantage of Chinese cities in the world, and respond to the high demand for information on Intelligent City from readers, this book discusses in detail the status, current problems, perspectives and methods in the development of Intelligent City in China.

China Environment and Development Review: The Rural Eco-Environment of China

Editor: Zhang Xiao

ISBN: 978-1-84464-456-8

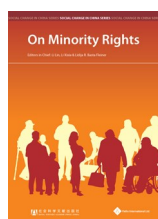

E-ISBN: 978-1-84464-457-5

£80 €100 $130/English/cloth/358/2015

This book focuses on rural eco-environment in China. It discusses issues concerned not only backgrounds but also some specific fields including water security issues, soil pollution, grassland ecological environment, nitrogen fertilizer excessive application and livestock produce safety issues.

China's dual economy is characterized by urban and rural economy, the mostly manifestation is the coexistence of urban economy and the county economy, and income gap between urban and rural residents. Farmers not only suffered the damage of the water and soil pollutions which brought on morbidity, poverty, even death, but also mostly don't have channels of expression and the right to speak, which may lead to social security incident. And also, rural pollution issues can cause agricultural decline in quality and even unsafe food for society. Therefore, the problems of rural pollution are our nation's most pressing environmental security.

Law, Human Rights and Woman Studies

On Minority Rights

Editor: Li Lin, Li Xixia, Lidija R. Basta Fleiner
